

kidz 4 him

newsletter

December 2008

Well its been nearly four weeks here and we have been busy sorting out the paperwork required to get KIDz4Him registered and with an NGO status here in Zambia. The registration process took two weeks and K1000,000.00 but now that we have the registration certificate we can apply for a bank account here, purchase a vehicle and get ZRA status. Then we can apply for three-year work visas. When we have been here 15 years we can apply for an entry visa, which makes us Zambian citizens.

We have had the first of the heavy rains, and the temperature has dropped considerably. The temperature is very pleasant and as I write this the birds are singing and the crickets are -whatever you call the crickets song..... LOL We have been housed with our friends here and we are blessed. We had to purchase last minute return tickets at the airport when we left Sydney and my sister just told me that they have been refunded so that is an answer to prayer.

Our shipping container was supposed to arrive in late January but is now coming in two weeks, and they won't release it until we have all the work visas and paper work in place so the push is on to get it done as quickly as possible. Otherwise they will charge us $500.00 US a day for demurrage costs. Not something we want so we are praying for a miracle in this process too.

We have been thinking about a lot of ways to witness for the LORD and something we believe the LORD laid on our hearts is a medical missionary boat on the lake. We want to purchase a small houseboat and have it trucked up to the lake and then refit it as a medical clinic to service the isolated villages on the lakes edge who have no access to medical help. So we are praying for funding for this project as well as the orphan homes.

Well that's about all the news I have to report at this time. I love to hear you all, as communication is something else here. The people are friendly enough but I miss the interaction. So if you get the chance email me or write my email address is sheree@kidz4him.com
